727 Of the districts which suffered occupation, economic rehabilitation
433 as well as capital construction amounting to 17,500 million roubles in
652 1946 made it possible to increase their industrial output by 28 per cent. as compared with 1945. Pravda writes - "the factories, mills, pits, power stations, towns and villages which were destroyed by the enemy are being revived one by one...."[1]

In the Ukraine

U
727 The Ukraine has been likened to one big building site, where more
433 than 500,000 workers are engaged in restoring industrial plants and
327 municipal buildings.[2] In the Donets Basin, the coal output of 1946 was 30 per cent. higher than that of 1945. In the Ukrainian iron and steel industry, 21 blast furnaces, 58 steel-smelting furnaces, 60 metal and pipe-rolling mills, and 71 coke batteries were at work by January 1947. Of 104 machine-building factories to be restored, 102 were already producing goods, and mastering the production of improved types of machinery. The Kharkov transport machine-building works was preparing to build long-distance steam engines; and the tractor works was increasing its production, as were many other factories.

U
727 In 1946 the Kharkov turbo-generator works made a 100,000 kilowatt
433 turbine and one of 50,000 kilowatts. At Dniepropetrovsk, a lorry
393 factory was being built; and in Odessa and Lvov, automobile assembly
398 works were under construction. Great work was also being done in the development of light industry, food processing, chemical works, and other branches of industry.

U
727 After three years' work of restoration the Dnieper Dam had been
433 rebuilt in the main, and the housing for the power station erected.
377 By the end of 1946 the capacity of Ukrainian power stations had reached 70 per cent. of pre-war.

U
362 Since the liberation over 104.5 million square feet of floor space
368 had been restored in the Ukraine. Over half a million of the 590,000 houses destroyed by the Germans were restored or built anew in Ukrainian villages; and more than 13,000 cultural institutions in the villages and 118,000 auxiliary buildings on the farms.[2]
